

restorative justice and peace circles

PEACE CIRCLES are an effective process used in many agencies and schools around the country. They provide an opportunity for youth and adults to come together in a safe and supportive way. This process improves communication skills, teaches new ways to solve conflicts, improves relationships, and is an effective way to celebrate achievements.

The key to developing a peaceful environment is to build community. Using a Circle is an effective tool for learning about one another and building trust. RESTORATIVE JUSTICE is a process whereby all parties with a stake in a particular offense come together to resolve collectively how to deal with the aftermath of the offense and its implications for the future.

The training is held from 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. and includes a continental-style breakfast, catered lunch and built-in breaks. PiRI offers three-day full trainings, as well as limited space in one-day trainings.

Participants will be involved in experiential learning. In the full training, each will practice what they have learned by leading a circle. They will be enabled to start using this process immediately.

Dress casually and be prepared to have fun!

Trainers, Jeanne Carlivati and Joan Mitchell

Joan Mitchell is a member of the Partners in Restorative Initiatives Board of Directors and a retired Montoe County probation officer. She serves on the Board of Visitors for Industry School and is active in the Baptist Peace Fellowship and Metro Justice.

Jeanne Carlivati is the Vice President of the PiRI Board of Directors and a retired school counselor. She conducts mediation training for students and staff through the Mediation Center of Rochester and is active in the Grief Resource Network.

Mary Reed is a member of the Board of Directors for Partners in Restorative Initiatives and a retired school administrator. She also volunteers for A Horse's Friend, a program for inner city children and youth.
